Cubs history ain't cheap, but it is in high demand

By Matt Lindner

FOR REDEYE

When it comes to Cubs fans, nothing sells quite like nostalgia.

There was no better evidence of this at last weekend's Cubs Convention than vendor Dave Noll trying to sell a pair of 20-year-old used shoes for $750.

"The coolest thing, I think, are these Ryne Sandberg game-worn baseball spikes," Noll said at the event, which took place at the Sheraton Chicago Hotel and Towers. "They were in the trenches. They were on Sandberg's feet. They probably helped him steal bases, field ground balls, jack baseballs out of the park. ... They're a piece of history."

Sandberg's spikes were one of many unusual, if not sentimental, items on sale at this weekend's Cubs Convention. And while most vendors tend to stick to mainstream items, people such as Fred Sherry include stuff that's off the beaten path for a simple reason.

"Everybody doesn't have it. You can't find it anywhere else," he said. "That's what I try to put my business on so I can sell stuff that way. It's easier. Everyone has pictures and photos and baseballs. You find the unique stuff, it's no problem, people want to buy stuff like that."

Don't drop it ...

No one in his or her right mind would pay $25 for a 10-year-old leaf in a plastic bag under normal circumstances. However, if said leaf was a piece of the ivy from the Wrigley Field wall picked in 2003 right after the Cubs lost Game 6 of the National League Championship Series, that's a different story.

"This is a piece of ivy that was there on the wall including that fateful night of the unfortunate incident," said Noll, referring to the infamous Steve Bartman play. "We go for the historically significant," he said when asked why he had so many obscure items in his collection.

And sure enough, three hours after RedEye interviewed Noll, someone had snapped up that piece of ivy.

That's his bag, baby

Fred Sherry, a UPS driver by day, had an assortment of unusual collectibles for sale Saturday.

One of his biggest-ticket items was an autographed blue duffel bag that late Cubs legend Ron Santo used to bring on road trips ($1,000).

"I bought this [bag] right from his son," he said. "You won't get that anywhere else."

Sherry also was hoping to capitalize on hockey's recent return by selling the Cubs jersey that Blackhawks legend Bobby Hull wore the night he sang the seventh-inning stretch in 2008 ($700).

"It comes with a picture of him in the booth singing 'Take Me Out to the Ball Game,'" he said. "Bobby Hull is always a good sell."

'Your nickname here'

Denny Graziano was hoping to unload jerseys with random names such as "Bucky 73" or "Ames 11" sewn on the back at $40 apiece.

If he's selling them, there's gotta be a market for them, right?

"Somebody has the nickname Bucky, somebody has the same last name [as the ones on the back of the jerseys], they would go for that," he said. "I have one, Nicole—beautiful. It's a female name."

Graziano said when it comes to personalized jerseys, the convenience factor goes a long way.

"They don't have to letter it," he said. "It's already done."

Someone wake up Manti Te'o's panda

Stephen Markley

» @stephenmarkley

The Manti Te'o hoax girlfriend-who-died-of-leukemia story easily is the weirdest sports scandal of the past 10 years. I even feel somewhat bad for the guy. I'm not sure what kind of advice he's getting, but instead of giving that lame and suspect off-camera interview to ESPN, he should have just given a press conference, said he was living in the dream of a baby panda, faked a stroke and called it a day.

Like so many of you, I spent the weekend going over possible theories with my friends. Te'o conspiracy theories may someday rival the JFK assassination's, so in preparation for the Manti Te'o Truth Movement, here are the best outside-the-box theories I could come up with.

1. Lance Armstrong orchestrated the whole thing. Who has benefited more from the Te'o scandal than disgraced cyclist Armstrong, whose doping scandal now looks so run-of-the-mill boring it's like watching the third hour of "Les Misérables" on Valium? Oprah is pissed. (Side bet: Oprah's people are furiously dialing the Te'o household as you read this.)

2. Te'o is caught up in some weird time travel loop. This sounds outlandish, but what if the Notre Dame linebacker stumbled upon a time machine and attempted to go back and save his very real girlfriend who actually died of leukemia? Because I'm a time travel expert (I've seen "Looper" and the 2007 Spanish-language film "Timecrimes"), I can attest that something probably went wrong. Te'o inadvertently screwed with the space-time continuum and somehow deleted his girlfriend's existence while leaving behind the Manti Te'o who still remembers her. This would easily be the coolest explanation.

3. Te'o is doing me a favor. I originally wrote a column on reports that if the drought continued to empty Lake Michigan, the Chicago River might reverse itself and spill sewage into the lake. Then the stupid Metropolitan Water Reclamation District had to come out and say that those reports were wrong, and it almost certainly couldn't happen. (I'll see you in hell, MWRD.) This sucked because as an unreconstructed Ohioan, I had great jokes about sending my fecal matter right into Michigan's craw. That column became lost to the ages, and I had to come up with something at the last second. Te'o had concocted the strangest sports scandal in a generation in case I ever got into a tough spot with a column deadline.

4. The sheer volume of hack sports writers who used the pun headline "The Full Manti" drove him insane.

5. He really wanted to meet Oprah.

6. A self-satisfied young man learned that sports media devours any and all clichés that utilize simplistic narratives about overcoming adversity, so he cynically exploited (or outright invented) this situation in order to garner attention, and on some deeper level, fortify his grief over the passing of a close family member and the inescapable cosmic terror that his faith, the faith of his school, and all faiths are powerless to shut out that grief—that we will believe the malarkey we want to believe, but in the end we will all dive into a deep, black night devoid of meaning or purpose.

7. All of us are living in the dream of a baby panda.

THE SEQUEL

FOUR MORE YEARS BEGINS FOR OBAMA—AFTER HIS FINAL INAUGURATION BLOWOUT

Reuters

WASHINGTON President Obama took the official oath for his second term Sunday at the White House in a small, private ceremony that set a more subdued tone compared with the historic start of his presidency four years ago.

Gathered with his family in the Blue Room on the White House's ceremonial main floor, Obama put his hand on a family Bible and recited the 35-word oath that was read out loud by U.S. Chief Justice John Roberts.

"I did it," Obama said as he hugged his wife, Michelle, and daughters Sasha and Malia. "Thank you, sweetie," he told Michelle when she congratulated him. "Good job, Dad. You didn't mess up," 11-year-old Sasha told her father.

It was a low-key start to the first African-American president's second term, which is likely to be dominated—at least at the start—by budget fights with Republicans and attempts to reform gun control and immigration laws.

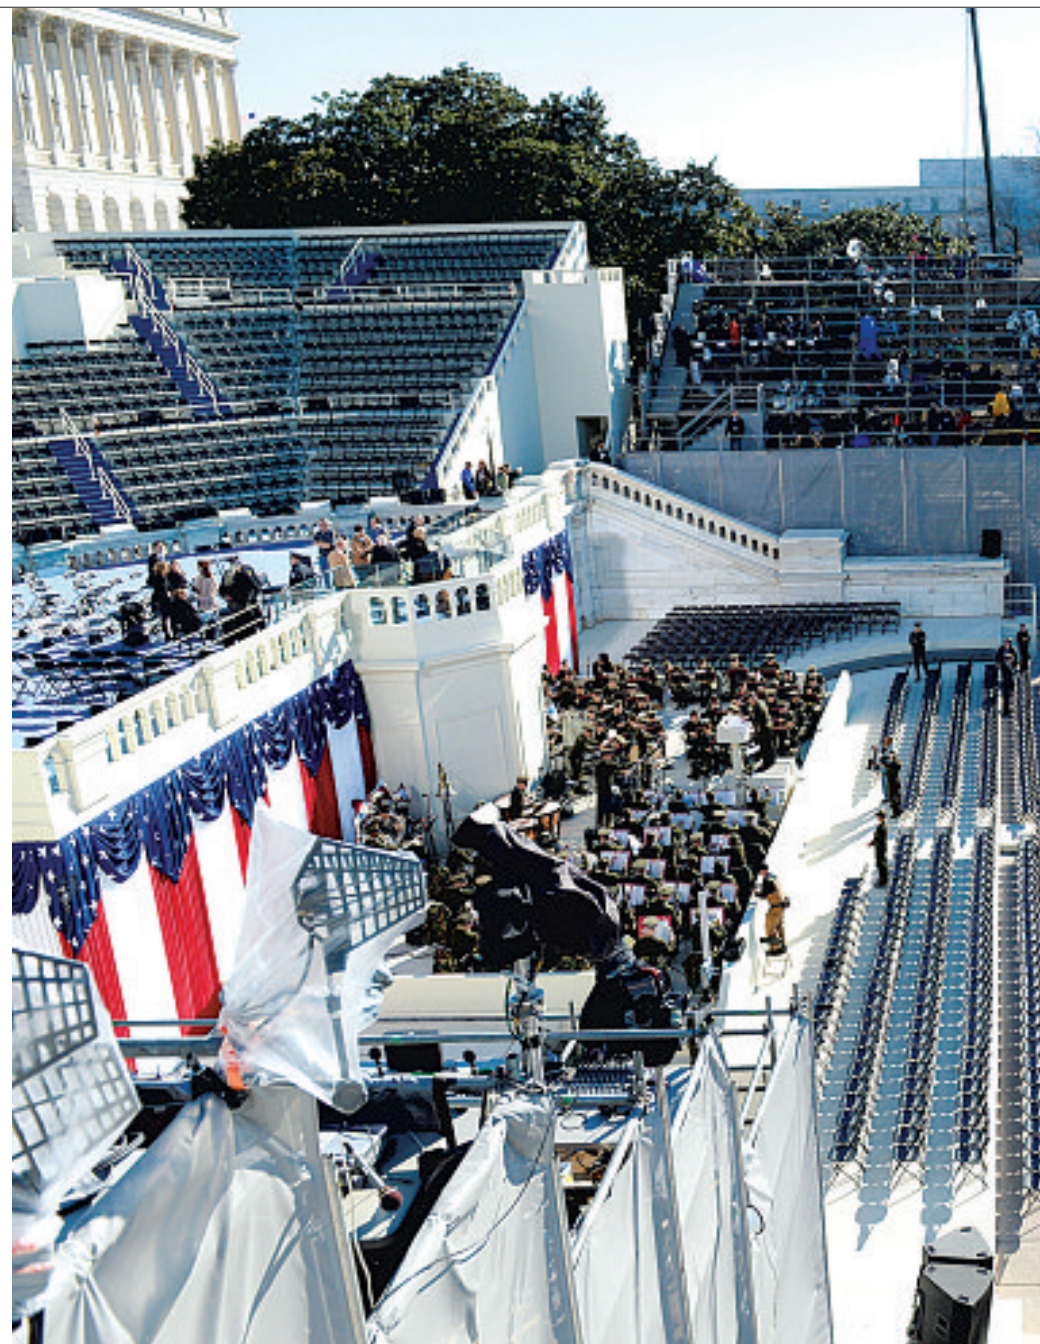

Obama, 51, will be sworn in publicly Monday outside the West Front of the Capitol overlooking the National Mall in front of as many as 800,000 people, a much bigger ceremony replete with a major address and a parade. The ceremony, which includes Beyoncé's performance of the national anthem among its prominent appearances, is scheduled to begin around 10:30 a.m. Central time, though TV coverage will begin hours earlier as guests arrive.

Downtown Washington was all but locked down with heavy security Sunday. Many streets were closed, lined with barricades. Police sirens blared. Outside the White House on Pennsylvania Avenue, an elaborate presidential viewing stand encased in bulletproof glass was set up for Obama and other VIPs to watch the parade.

Sunday's ceremony, shown live on TV, was necessary because the Constitution mandates that the president take office Jan. 20. Planners opted to go with a private ceremony on the actual date and then hold the ceremonial inaugural activities the next day.

By Monday, Obama will have been sworn in four times, two for each term, putting him equal to Franklin Roosevelt, who won four terms. A second Obama swearing-in was deemed necessary in 2009 when Roberts flubbed the first one. On Sunday, Roberts read the oath carefully from a card and made no mistakes.

Obama, who won a second four years Nov. 6 by defeating Republican Mitt Romney after a bitter campaign, opens round two facing many of the same problems that dogged his first term: persistently high unemployment, crushing government debt and a deep partisan divide over how to solve the issues.

This has taken some of the euphoria out of his second inauguration, with TV pundits debating how successful he will be and whether he can avoid the policy overreaching that often afflicts two-term presidents.

If the president harbored any doubts himself, there was no sign of it as he attended a rousing service at Metropolitan African Methodist Episcopal Church in downtown Washington where he and Michelle clapped and swayed to gospel music.

"Forward, forward," Rev. Ronald Braxton shouted to his congregation, echoing an

Hours before he and President Obama were due to be sworn in for their second four-year terms, Vice President Biden told supporters at the Iowa State Society inauguration ball late Saturday: "I'm proud to be president of the United States." Message of Obama's address: Get involved

CNN

As the hours wound down to President Obama's inaugural address, the White House said it sees Monday's remarks as one in a series of speeches laying out the president's vision for his second term that started with his victory on election night.

The tone of Obama's inaugural address will be "hopeful," White House senior adviser David Plouffe said.

"What he's going to do is remind the country that our founding principles and values still can guide us in a changing and modern world," he said Sunday on CNN's "State of the Union."

Asked if bipartisanship had slipped from the administration's focus since the election considering the sharp rhetoric over issues such as raising the debt ceiling and gun legislation in the aftermath of the Sandy Hook massacre, Plouffe pushed back.

"Our point was that we are trying to enlist the American people in these debates," he said. "The only way change is really going to happen and we really make progress is for the American people -- it's one of the lessons of the first term—they need to be involved at the center of this and pushing here."

"The barrier is there are factions here in Congress, Republicans in Congress, that are out of the mainstream, so we need to bring the American people into these debates."

Biden's family, about 120 guests and a few reporters witnessed the private swearing-in ceremony in the main foyer of his Naval Observatory residence. Biden used a Bible with a Celtic cross on the cover that has been in his family since 1893.

The audience for Monday's ceremony is not expected to be as big as it was in 2009, when a record 1.8 million people crammed into the National Mall to witness the swearing-in. Turnout is projected at 600,000 to 800,000, with millions more watching on TV.

With the public ceremony falling on the national holiday honoring slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., Obama will have a chance to draw historic parallels in his speech. While taking the oath Monday, he will place his left hand on two Bibles—one once owned by Abraham Lincoln and the other by King.

The Obamas will attend two official inaugural balls, compared with the 10 that were held in 2009.

Oh, hey! It's winter

Bitter cold? Snow? That's more like January in Chicago

Chicago Tribune

Like a party guest who shows up late and takes over the dance floor, winter has arrived in Chicago.

The National Weather Service was calling for sustained low temperatures and subzero wind chills Sunday night through midweek. But the main attraction—or, depending on the length of the driveway or sidewalk you have to shovel, repulsion—is snow that could shroud the city Thursday.

"There's still uncertainty on how it plays out," National Weather Service meteorologist Richard Castro said. "But a lot of the computer models are giving a solution that would bring the first accumulating snow of the season."

After more than 700 days without dipping below zero and about 11 months without a major snowstorm, Chicagoans are about to be reminded that they don't live in Oklahoma.

If the current projections hold steady, Thursday could end a record-setting stretch of about 330 calendar days without an inch of snow.

That snow would come after a stretch of extreme cold that's expected to drop wind chills to minus 17 degrees Monday. Temperatures at O'Hare are expected to dip to minus 1 overnight, which would end the city's fourth-longest streak without a subzero reading. The record of 1,415 days, set in 1940, is about two years away.

This week will be a frosty chapter in a balmy winter that already has seen Chicago bust records for days without a sub-freezing high temperature and the latest 1-inch snowfall.

Whether or not the mercury finally plunges below zero, Castro said residents would be smart to bundle up and avoid long stretches outdoors.

"It's something we haven't seen since 2011," he said. "Even though Chicagoans have [endured] past cold winters, we haven't dealt with anything like this for a while. So it's going to be a shock to the system."

The statue was located in front of the Harold Washington Cultural Center on the 4700 block of South Martin Luther King Jr. Drive, police said. TRIBUNE

Algerian hostage toll hits 48

4 ALGIERS, Algeria The death toll has risen to at least 48 hostages killed during a four-day siege at a gas plant deep in the Sahara as a veteran Islamist fighter claimed responsibility for the attack on behalf of al-Qaida. Prime Minister Abdelmalek Sellal is expected to give details at a Monday news conference about one of the worst international hostage crises in decades, which left American, British, French, Japanese, Norwegian and Romanian workers dead or missing.

A security source said Sunday that Algerian troops had found the bodies of 25 hostages, raising the number of militants and their captives killed to at least 80. He said six militants were captured alive and troops were still searching for others.

Mokhtar Belmokhtar, a one-eyed veteran Islamist fighter, claimed responsibility for the attack Sunday.

"We in al-Qaida announce this blessed operation," he said in a video, according to Sahara Media, a regional website. He said about 40 attackers participated in the raid, roughly matching the government's figures for fighters killed and captured.

The fighters swooped out of the desert and seized the base Wednesday, capturing a plant that produces 10 percent of Algeria's natural gas exports, as well as a nearby residential barracks.

They demanded an end to the French air strikes against Islamist fighters in neighboring Mali that had begun five days earlier.

The siege turned bloody Thursday when the Algerian army opened fire, saying fighters were trying to escape with their prisoners. Survivors said Algerian forces blasted several trucks in a convoy carrying both hostages and their captors.

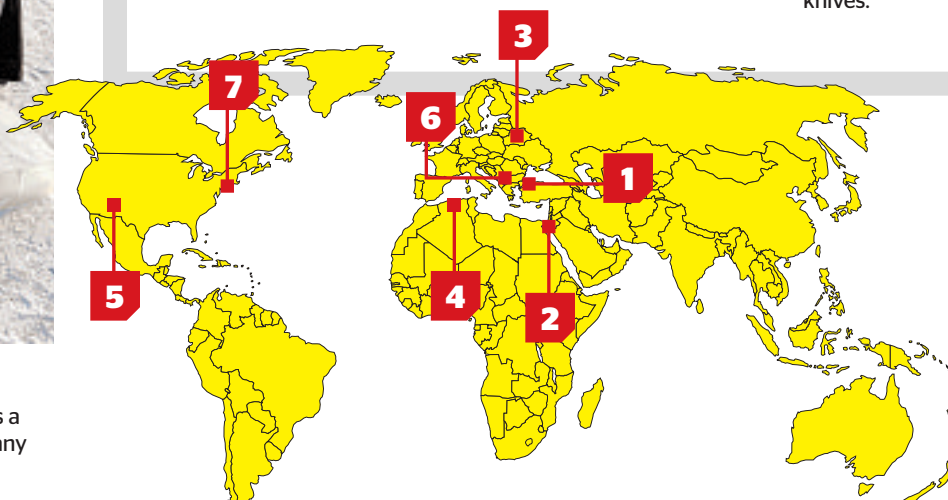

Nearly 700 Algerian workers and more than 100 foreigners escaped, mainly Thursday when the fighters were driven from the residential barracks. Some captors remained holed up in the industrial complex until Saturday when they were overrun.

Five shot in 3 gun show accidents
Five people were wounded in accidents at three gun shows Saturday, including three hurt at a North Carolina event when a 12-gauge shotgun discharged as the owner opened its case, officials said. None of the five people hurt in Saturday's accidents—in North Carolina, Ohio and Indiana—suffered life-threatening injuries.

5 Teen charged in fatal shooting
A 15-year-old boy with several weapons, including an assault rifle, shot and killed five people late Saturday night, three of them children, at a house in Albuquerque, N.M., authorities said Sunday. He was charged with two counts of murder and three counts of child abuse resulting in death.

6 Bulgarian leader escapes assassination
A man jumped on stage and pointed a gun at Ahmed Dogan, the leader of Bulgaria's ethnic Turkish party, before security guards wrestled him to the ground during a televised conference Saturday. Dogan escaped unscathed, and police said they had arrested a 25-year-old man from the Black Sea town of Burgas who also was carrying two knives.

7 TSA nixes full-body scanners
The Transportation Security Administration said Friday it is removing all 174 controversial full-body airport scanners and replacing them with new models that allow greater privacy. The TSA canceled a contract with Rapiscan, a unit of OSI Systems Inc, on Thursday because the company had failed to deliver software to protect the privacy of passengers.

sports FIELD OF DREAMS?

Cubs to city: Untie our hands and we'll make Wrigley shine like new

Chicago Tribune

For all the charm and nostalgia oozing from Wrigley Field, the historic ballpark fields its share of criticism. It's been called cramped, decrepit and overflowing with boozing bleacher bums.

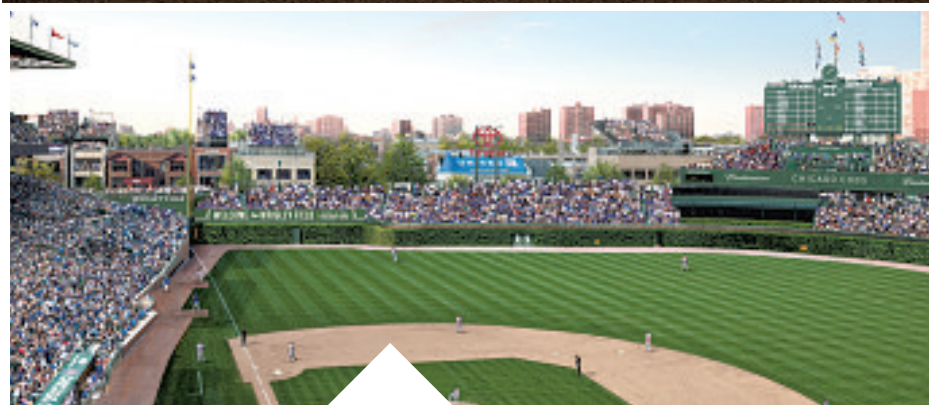

Well, the third thing on that list isn't likely to change. However, the Cubs are offering to fund a $300 million renovation project themselves if ordinances and landmarking provisions are eased.

The Cubs put on a full-court press Saturday, revealing their plans at the Cubs Convention. Now the ball is in Mayor Emanuel's court. The Cubs have spoken to Emanuel's representatives, and Cubs business president Crane Kenney said he feels the mayor will be amenable to the new proposal. If the team gets the green light from the city, it would reshape the ballpark over five off-seasons.

Some of the proposed changes, such as renovations to the press box and clubhouses, will be barely noticeable to fans and neighborhood residents. Yet a great deal of the construction would alter the Wrigley experience—likely for the better. Here are five areas the changes at Wrigley would affect.

YOUR LEISURE

The plans for a so-called "Triangle building" on the parking lot west of the ballpark was scrapped for an open-air area that can be used for a farmer's market, ice rink, movie watching and other activities. Mike Lufano, Cubs executive vice president of community affairs, said the idea of having 400 vehicles enter the Triangle building for parking "wasn't something that was particularly well-thought of" by fans.

YOUR EYES

In terms of new signage, the Cubs said the outfield is the most lucrative spot in terms of revenue. Purists might complain that more ads mar the vista, though the real problem could come from nearby rooftop owners whose views might be blocked by a large sign, like the Toyota sign in left field.

The Cubs also will remove the LED board under the center-field scoreboard. They hope to add one above the left-field bleacher wall. "This will help us ensure all fans who sit in the bowl seats will have access to the statistics and information we can provide," senior marketing director Alison Miller said. The Cubs also appear to be gaining support for a mini-Jumbotron; Miller said the Cubs are "considering it" for the renovation.

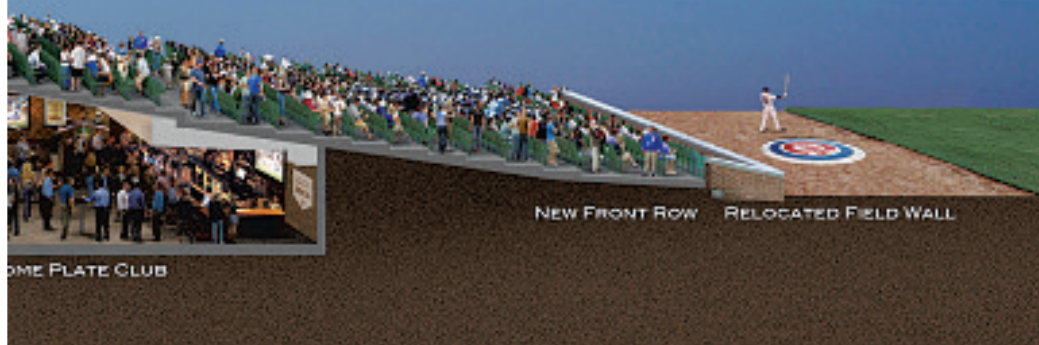

YOUR POSTURE

With 50 million pounds of concrete and steel removed and replaced, and new seats installed, will they be properly angled to watch the game without craning one's neck? Kenney said the re-pouring of concrete will give them an opportunity to "adjust some of the seat levels and angles toward the field." The Cubs also will install new handrails throughout the park.

That said, one thing that won't change is the posts that obstruct some fans' views. Vice president of ballpark operations Carl Rice explained: "We've looked at all the steel structure throughout the entire building, evaluating each one of the columns. Really, to keep the historic charm and the overhang of the upper deck being so close to the lower deck, we really need to keep all of those columns in place.”

This conceptual illustration shows proposed modifications to Wrigley Field, including new luxury boxes, concessions and seating. Shown here are ideas for the upper level seating and concessions area.

YOUR SCHEDULE

Kenney said fans want 3:05 p.m. starting times on Fridays, which are prohibited by the city because of neighborhood concerns over parking when lights were first installed. “When the club returns from a road trip on the West Coast, they like to play later in the day,” Kenney said.

Lufrano said neighbors “overwhelmingly” also want more special events, like the concerts, the Northwestern-Illinois football game and the Winter Classic hockey game. He said they like street fests such as the one on Sheffield Avenue as well, though some business owners feel the fests take away from their own revenues.

YOUR ... NECESSITIES

The Cubs will increase bathroom capacity by 42 percent, they said, including more in the upper deck. “I never thought we’d have focus groups about troughs in the men’s restrooms,” Kenney cracked. He did not say whether the troughs would be replaced, saying fans were “evenly divided” on the issue.

Chicago Bears - and Bulls loving beast

1 What do you make of the Blackhawks so far?	They beat the Stanley Cup Champs out of the box—I like it!	I'm already gearing myself up for the RedEye/Blackhawks playoff beard challenge!	I think they have a chance to rekindle their real relationship with Stan Cup.	Did they beat L.A.? Yes? OK, I have no complaints.	As long as Kaner stays out of trouble, they'll be fine.
2 Say something nice about the Lakers before they play the Bulls on Monday.	"Hahaha—you got Dwight Howard! Good for yooooouuuuuu! (That's nice ... for us.)"	"Hey Steve Nash! Nice haircut. It's about time too."	Kobe has earned his yellow jerseys.	That yellow and purple color scheme is Lisa Frank-approved.	I love how celebrities attend games in droves. They taste like chicken.
3 First Tebowing, now Te'oling. What's next?	Armstronging: Do it, lie about it, confess to Oprah or God (same thing).	Toews-ing, when the Blackhawks captain scores an electrifying goal!	D-Rosing. It's real and it's spectacular.	Next, let's go home, take a nap and dream of a meme-less world.	Thibodeau-ing. Lots of stomping and yelling. Can't get enough—reminds me of me.
4 Whom should Marc Trestman add to the Bears coaching staff?	Mini Ditka inside Devin Hester's helmet to tell him to run NORTH/SOUTH!	Me, since it looks like sports nerds are running the team now.	Coach Kekua: great at hiding secrets and disguising plays.	All 79 members of Arcade Fire, plus Megan from "Mad Men" and a bowl of poutine.	If you can't get Ditka, at least get his mustache.
5 Now that the Sox will wear 1983 uniforms for Sunday home games let's hope looking ugly and winning ugly go hand in hand in 2013.	... all Sox fans will be required to have feathered hair and wear Members Only jackets.	... it's a cool idea, unless Jerry Dybzinski is wearing one. (old man reference)	... they should set concessions at 1983 prices. Suck it, inflation!	... I'll have an excuse to break out my Walter Payton jersey again!

2 coaches enter, only 1 emerges as Mom's favorite

It's not quite the battle of the Manning brothers, but now that the Super Bowl matchup is set, there is a family divided. Several hours after Jim Harbaugh's San Francisco 49ers beat Atlanta 28-24, John's Baltimore Ravens took care of New England 28-13. So instead of waiting two weeks for the Super Bowl, our faceoff will predict the winner right now, based on the sibling rivalry. REDEYE

Kevin Bacon (center)
in 'The Following'

Six degrees of Kevin's baggage

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

» @showpatrol

After more than 60 movies in a career spanning 35 years, Kevin Bacon wanted to up the dramatic ante with his first starring role in a prime-time series on Fox's "The Following."

"I'm the guy from 'Footloose.' The biggest issue was whether or not the town was going to be allowed to dance or not. You know, underground worms ['Tremors']. ... So I certainly like to mix it up," the 54-year-old told me Thursday during a conference call with reporters.

He turned down a lot of TV scripts because, he said, the stakes weren't high enough. "I wanted to do something that was about life and death because ... the things that I was kind of drawn to in a series, things like 'Breaking Bad' and 'The Killing' and 'Homeland' and 'The Wire,' even 'Game of Thrones,' a lot of them are about life and death."

"The Following," premiering Monday, is about life—and a lot of death. Bacon plays troubled former FBI agent Ryan Hardy, who is pulled back into action after the prison escape of Joe Carroll (James Purefoy), whom Hardy captured after Carroll killed 14 women. Carroll has been keeping busy while in prison, managing to create via the Internet a social network of cultish followers who help him lead Hardy and the FBI on a deadly cat-and-mouse chase as the bodies pile up.

Hardy, an alcoholic who must wear a pacemaker ever since Carroll stabbed him in the chest, has been lost and alone for 10 years, tortured by the things he's seen.

"He's got a lot of baggage and a lot of that baggage is guilt," Bacon said. "[Show creator] Kevin Williamson said to me very early on in our conversations ... 'This is a guy who has been surrounded by death.' And that's continuing, you know, in his life. I think that part of him feels that maybe he has some piece of that, that he has some responsibility for that."

Bacon had been looking for about four years to follow his wife, former "Closer" star Kyra Sedgwick, to TV. The damaged Hardy was exactly the kind of character he wanted to play.

"Uh-huh, I ... hrm, well, Doctor. I don't, man," he said with a chuckle when asked what makes him want to explore such a dark, unhappy character. "But when I was trying to choose a series, I wanted to be the hero. I wanted the character to be complex and flawed because that's the kind of heroes that I like to play and that's the kind of heroes that I like to see. That's the stuff that performance is made of."

GREG BORZO

U.S. SUPREME COURT JUSTICE SONIA SOTOMAYOR

The Chicago Public Library welcomes United States Supreme Court Associate Justice Sonia Sotomayor—the first Hispanic and third woman appointed to the United States Supreme Court—for a discussion of her memoir My Beloved World, in which she recounts her transition from her early life growing up in a Bronx housing project to being an associate justice on the country's highest federal bench. The free event takes place on Wednesday, January 30 at 6 p.m., in the Winter Garden (9th Floor) at the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 S. State St. Seating is available first come, first served and limited to Winter Garden capacity. Reservations are not required. Books can be purchased at this event and Justice Sotomayor will autograph books at the conclusion of the program. For more information, visit chicagopubliclibrary.org, or call 312-747-4050. horoscope

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

The sun in your sign is increasing your ability to draw positive people to you. You could meet your new best friend. Or you might discover that you and your sweetheart are starting to connect at a deeper level.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Don't let loneliness or boredom make you vulnerable. Try not to elope with someone who has spent time in jail. Don't let yourself fall for a thief or scam artist. The moon says it's time to wise up.

Aries March 21-April 19

A funky moon is putting you in a weird place. Part of you is thinking about taking a vow of celibacy. Another part of you wants to go all in with your current romantic partner.

Taurus April 20-May 20

You're in an analytical mood, thanks to Saturn. You could end up playing therapist to your best friend or guiding your lover as he makes an action plan to take over the world.

Gemini May 21-June 21

Mars is creating career shake-ups. You're not sure if you're going to get fired or promoted. Cash flow is OK one minute, disastrous the next. Air signs aren't so great at managing money. Ask your sweetheart to help.

Cancer June 22-July 22

If your lover hasn't satisfied you properly in months, it's time to complain. If you're single and someone has been leading you on, tell him or her to stop being a tease. Venus says take action.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

A friendly full moon in your sign is boosting your confidence and your sexual stamina. You'll schedule three dates in 24 hours and leave each one of your lovers grinning ear to ear.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Communication will be intense this week. You could find yourself handling a crisis at work, dealing with an upset family member and working on improving your romantic relationship all at once. Mercury says you can handle it.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Your creativity is strong right now as Mars increases your brain activity. You might end up writing a love poem or crafting a hot sext message. Or you could discover that you have a real talent for composing romantic songs.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

It's best to let go of those petty revenge fantasies. Saturn has you thinking about all the exes who did you wrong or the former friends who betrayed you. Don't waste time dwelling on negative people.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Someone surprising could fall for you this week, thanks to Mars. Something flirtatious and frisky could be in the making.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Sometimes Earth signs aren't good at understanding emotions. Your honey might be moody, but this doesn't mean that he or she is trying to stir up trouble. Venus says be more understanding.

The Immersion MBA™ (iMBA)

AN ELITE PART-TIME MBA PROGRAM FOR SAVVY, EMERGING PROFESSIONALS

Immersive • Innovative • Interactive • Individualized • Interesting
And, most importantly, IMPACTFUL.

The iMBA program equips you with the real-world business experience that employers expect of their leadership. Companies hire people who have “been there” and “done that” when it comes to critical business challenges — like mergers and acquisitions, major change management, globalization and more. The iMBA takes you directly into these challenges and allows you to develop and hone skills that other professionals simply don’t have.

In just 22 months, you’ll add the type of experience to your resume that others take a decade to accomplish. The iMBA is where virtual business meets real results.

Never before has the rigor and reputation of a Lake Forest MBA been available and so well suited to aspiring professionals (those with fewer than four years of business experience). So why wait? Like the Lake Forest Leadership MBA, the iMBA offers the same not-for-profit academic mission, same business-leader faculty, and same “learn it today, use it tomorrow” approach to business school. Now available in an engaging virtual reality format just for you, wherever you live.

Wood may be retired, but he still draws a crowd of celebs

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

When popular athletes retire, charity work can become a double-edged sword. On one hand, they have more time to dedicate to their cause. On the other, they may not have the same star power they did during their playing days.

Former Cub Kerry Wood has proven to be an exception to this rule since he retired in May after a 14-year career.

You wouldn't know the 1998 National League Rookie of the Year and two-time All-Star had retired from the response he received Friday when he was introduced at the Cubs Convention at the Sheraton Chicago Hotel & Towers—it was said to be one of the loudest ovations of the event. The support he received at his crowded Woody's Winter Warm-Up fundraiser that night at Harry Caray's Tavern at Navy Pier was just as enthusiastic.

$100K

According to a spokeswoman for the Wood Family Foundation, more than $100,000 was raised at Friday's fundraiser. Last year's event raised more than $80,000.

Wood's second annual benefit drew Cubs Chairman Tom Ricketts, President Theo Epstein, manager Dale Sveum and players including Matt Garza (who worked the ice cream table), Anthony Rizzo, Jeff Samardzija and Darwin Barney. Also in attendance was Cubs legend Ernie Banks, who even at 81 years old never seems to miss a Cubs party, and Plain White T's guitarist Dave Pirio. In June, nearly every Cubs player (and WWE champion CM Punk) attended Wood's seventh annual Strike Zone Celebrity Bowling Tournament at 10pin

Bowling Lounge.

Still, Wood knows the challenges that face his Wood Family Foundation—the children-focused charity he founded with his wife Sarah in 2011—the longer he is away from the game.

"There are a bunch of guys on the team I don't know," Wood said Friday. "I hope the guys I do know will talk them into it, and, obviously, I'll ask. There are a lot of guys who I met for the first time and they were excited to come. I always get great support from the fellas and the whole organization."

According to Sarah Wood, the bowling tournament, considered the foundation's signature event, will be replaced this year by a whiffle ball fundraiser at Wrigley Field in August.

"We felt the bowling event ran its course, with me no longer being a player and having access to the guys," Wood said. "Also, a lot of people are doing bowling events and we kind of wanted to do something more exclusive that not everybody can duplicate."

Sister act?

Jennifer Hudson is under some serious pressure to have a second kid. "I definitely want another baby," the Chicago native told eonline.com. "I want a little girl so bad and every day [David Jr.] reminds me, 'Mommy, I want a baby sister. I want a baby sister.'" Yeah, he says that now ...

"I was mad. I then got kind of sad for him."

—Matthew McConaughey, to mtv.com, on his bro Lance Armstrong's confession that he used performance-enhancing drugs to win the Tour de France seven times

THE DIGIT
$28.1 MILLION

That's how much "Mama" scared up in its debut weekend to win the domestic box office, Bloomberg reports. "Zero Dark Thirty," which also stars Jessica Chastain, dropped to second with $17.6 million.

Arcade Fire sale

Arcade Fire recorded their last two albums in small-town Quebec in a church with an overgrown yard and a leaky roof, because OF COURSE they did. Now the church is on the market. You can get the whole shebang, stained-glass windows and all, for just $325,000 Canadian, avclub.com reports. That's $327,489 for us Yanks.

Do not approve

Taylor Swift is not invited to Michael J. Fox's house. This was a question that needed to be asked, of course, because Tina Fey joked at the Golden Globes that the unlucky-in-love country singer should steer clear of Fox's 23-year-old son, Sam, who was a helper at the awards show. "No. No ... just back off," Fox told vulture.com. Good job, Michael.

LATER, BIEBER

Selena Gomez raised eyebrows Saturday at a private concert in New York, referring several times to moving on from a relationship (but not mentioning ex-boyfriend Justin Bieber's name). "I've been through a lot the past few months. It's been weird and sad and cool," she said, according to usmagazine.com. Emphasis on the "weird," we presume.
